MG Veruv,

After 22 years of service in United States Marine Corps leadership positions, I have developed a keen ability to identify critical supporting efforts for mission accomplishment. The Israel National Defense College (also known as Mabal) is a world-renowned international military institution. The program only continues growth toward being one of the most prominent programs internationally. Critical to its operation is the ability to accurately translate and interpret Hebrew into English for its International Fellows. Without accurate translation, the program would not maintain its excellence and international military organizations would not continue sending their very best to the course.

ALLTEXT Corporation has provided outstanding service for the last several INDC classes. Key to their success has been two employees, Mrs. Yulia Cherninand Keren Druyak who have been interpreting for a combined 15 years, with four years at Mabal. I have observed and interacted with Yulia and Keren for the past 12 months. As a native English speaker, I would rate their skills at the highest level of fluency. They have provided more than 1,760 hours of translation from lecturers spanning Noble Laurate recipients, Medical and Military professionals, and world business leaders, most of which lecture at the post-doctoral degree level. The diversity of speakers and the complexity of topics were always handled with seeming ease. This speaks volumes to the professionalism and capability of ALLTEXT and two of their outstanding interpreters.

Reducing the quality of interpreters below the current level will move the INDC program backward and not keep it on track to be the primer top level senior military institution it desires to be. I recommend recognizing these two standout interpreters and continued investment of quality interpreters like those provided by ALLTEXT for future Mabal classes.

Sincerely,

Michael Smith
