¹ Operational Simulation is a technique through which we can simulate the outcome of an Operational Plan. This is done with a state-of-the-art computer system which is fed with unique methodologies and performance data regarding the different weapon systems that are in use. The system is fed data regarding different weapon systems (accuracy, wear & tear, destruction abilities, etc.), likewise, the system is fed with data regarding the Operational Plan. Thereafter, at a click of a button, the system simulates the execution of the Operational Plan and its expected outcome. The tool significantly assists decision-makers with the tough decisions they face regarding the future of force employment and force build-up.
